This doesn't mean the American in the armed forces is supposed to nab him for her own. All she has to do is make him feel there's a girl back home who is interesting enough in what is happening to him and what he is doing to write him first and then answer all his letters.

If he has an American girl to write to, to tell what he thinks of this and that, he isn't so likely to find himself married to a girl of some other country.

If he comes home single, he is just one more potential husband

But either way he has been saved

Friday, May 22nd
The regular meeting for the members of the Friday Music club will be held at the home of Mrs. Jess Davis, 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. E. M. McWilliams will compliment Miss Joe Thompson with an afternoon bridge party, 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Jim Henry is the assisting hostess.

Interesting Plans Made

By Lilac Club
Mrs. H. F. Garrett and Mrs. Pat Casey were hostesses to members of the Lilac Garden club at the home of the former Thursday afternoon.

The business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. A. E. Slusser. Provisions were made for a money donation for the soldier's Hempstead county room at Camp Robinson.

Mrs. Ponzie Moses gave a report of the recent meeting of the 3rd District of Federated Garden clubs held in Texarkana.

A recent motor tour of Oklahoma was described by Mrs. J. A. Henry. She told of plans being used in larger cities to display the American flag daily at all business houses and public buildings for the duration of the war. At the suggestion of the club, Mrs. Henry will introduce the plan to the city at the "Arm an American Day" to be held Sunday at the city hall.

A program was presented by Mrs. Malcolm Porterfield, who introduced Mrs. H. C. Whitworth and Mrs. Ted Jones. Their topics were "Wild Flowers of Arkansas" and "Where They Are Found."

Mrs. Mark Smyth read an interesting story of spring. Closing her program, Mrs. Porterfield gave the history of the Maypole.

During the social hour a delightful tea course was served with cake to 16 members and 3 guests. Effective arrangements of lilies formed the floral decor in the reception rooms of the home.

Cemetery Association Adds New Shrubs to Rose Hill
As president of the Cemetery Association, Mrs. W. G. Allison has extended her appreciation to members of the 5 garden clubs.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Bay View Reading club for their cooperation in presenting 50 mandina plants to the Cemetery Association to be used in beautifying Rose Hill Cemetery.

The public is invited to view the mound, where the shrubs have been planted.

Thursday Club Meets With Miss Bridewell

On Thursday evening Miss Elizabeth Bridewell was hostess to members of the Thursday Contract bridge club at her home. Enjoying the weekly games were members and 3 guests.

Playing resulted in Mrs. Mack Duffee receiving the high score gift and Mrs. Carey Carlton of Albany, New York, the bingo prize. Following the spirited games, the hostess served delicious ice cream and cake.

Coming and Going

Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Greening and young son, Gus, have arrived from Houston to be weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Greening and other relatives and friends.

CARIBBEAN CRISIS

By EATON K. GOLDFTHWAITE

THE STORY—Four visitors arrive at a Dutch West India Island. Bill Talcott, who is building a new oil refinery, is the manager for an American chemical firm. They are joined by Mr. Tversky, an auditor, who immediately discovers a small of a large shortage in his new country. McDowell, a detective brought to take Bill back to New York, is found, and June Patterson, his former roommate, finds two more visitors arrived on the island by a smuggling operation. A Norwegian refugee, and Prof. Constantine, an anthropologist. Next morning the auditor comes with an urgent message before "you return to New York."

SHOWDOWN WITH STRUTHERS

CHAPTER X

HALSEY seemed completely taken aback, and Bill Talcott, studying him intently, was unable to decide whether his astonishment was feigned or real. "Back to New York?" Halsey stammered. "But I just got here—I'm to stay on as the new manager—"

"You WERE the new manager," Struthers said coldly. Shrugging, he glanced significantly at the others. "Where is Mr. MacDowell?" he demanded.

June Patterson's ready ire manifested itself. "He's in bed recovering from a stroke. You nice about what's going on around here the poor man just couldn't stand it."

Faint color crept through the auditor's cheeks. "Please don't be sarcastic," he said. "This is quite a serious matter—Halsey, I thought I heard shots. What happened?"

Halsey left off looking puzzled long enough to give a rapid transcription of events, wound up with, "I looked in your room but couldn't find you."

"Which is only natural, since I spent the night at work," the auditor grunted. "Very well, if MacDowell can't come to us we'll go to him," Halsey and Talcott, if you'll come along."

Talcott arose silently. So Struthers had been spending the night in the office, patching up his case. Increasingly clear was the indication that Struthers was making every effort to discredit him. But why? What possible motive could the man have for such a course? Did he hope to gain; was he in a conspiracy to defraud the company? Surely as auditor he must have known about the duplicate vouchers. He must have known that the vouchers themselves were of no value; that all billing and collecting was done by the New York office; that the only money to pass through Bill Talcott's hands was in the form of payroll checks. Yet forcibly Struthers' words came back to him—"entirely possible you haven't

So it's payroll padding, too, is it?" Bill Talcott said coldly. "I'm getting to be a dangerous character."

"You are the one that's saying it," Struthers returned with equal coldness. "Well, MacDowell, are you going to get up?"

"Get up—" MacDowell muttered thickly. He thrust one leg over the side of the bed, sought the floor with his toes, groaned and said, "I think my neck's broke!"

Leonard Halsey had crossed to the other side of the room. His lean face was wrinkled in concern. "Look here, Struthers," he said. "It seems to me this could be handled in a much nicer way. So far as I know, nobody has heard Talcott's side of the story. He has an excellent record with the company. Why not give him a chance to defend himself?"

The auditor's thin lips curled. "His side of the story is in the records. Halsey, I'm an auditor. I don't like these scenes any better than you do. But there are

Lord's Supper Sanctifies Fellowship and Adds Significance to Communion
Text: Luke 22:14-20By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

If the scenes in our lesson, the Last Supper, were not sufficiently dramatic in the simple description which the New Testament record gives, great artists would have dramatized it for us and made the setting unforgettable. The greatest depiction of the scene in art is the famous painting by Leonardo da Vinci, though it is more accurate in the emotions that it evokes than in its historical detail. It is unlikely that the disciples ate at a long table of Leonardo's arrangement. More likely they were grouped together at tables in the form of a hollow square, and were reclining instead of sitting.

But the physical details are unimportant. Jesus and His disciples were Jews, and in harmony with the statement of Jesus that He had not come to destroy the law or the prophets, they were engaged in what was, and continues to be, the holiest of all Jewish observances, the celebration of the Passover. This specific celebration in the upper room has a new and added of the Christian sacrament, or the historical significance as the origin of the Lord's Supper, which is so much the essence of Christian faith and fellowship that we speak of Christian bodies, or denominations, as "communions."

Was Jesus consciously establishing such a rite? It is a question we may ask, but that we cannot answer. Much might be said for the idea that Jesus was sanctifying all fellowship and all partaking of food together. The supper that the disciples ate was evidently a real meal. The small portion of bread and wine, of which modern congregations partake in the Lord's Supper, is symbolic rather than real, and church suppers have little relation to that supper in the upper room. Yet why should they not have? Why, without becoming sad and solemn occasions, should not every mingling of Christians to

Frankenstein Monster in Person at Saenger Saturday Night

Midnight Show Will Feature Spooks Galore

Frankenstein monster in person featured with Dr. Silkin in the Saenger theater Saturday night.

Do you believe in spirits or spiritual manifestations?

Whether you do or not you will be thrilled and dumbfounded when Dr. Silkin presents his version of the Frankenstein Monster in person, on the stage of the Saenger theater, midnight Saturday.

You will ask yourself, are they humans or demons—these strange people who seem to have the unbelievable power to change their bodies at will and pass through solid walls?

During one of the many spectacular seances, Dr. Silkin introduces a real spirit medium, who, while completely surrounded by members of the audience presents a regular old time spirit seance during which trumpets, and tambourines sail through space and other strange and eerie happenings take place upon the full lighted stage; and during the dark seance when all lights in the theatre are out you will witness human skeletons dropping down out of space to sit beside you. Dr. Silkin in person will appear midnight show only Saturday at the Saenger theater.

to increase the production of war material for Hitler throughout the German-dominated continent. This threatens to reach such volume that the Nazis may build up a strength in weapons and fortifications that will be hard to beat—ever.

This danger seems real to expert American opinion, and must have been discussed in the recent conferences for which Harry Hopkins and General George C. Marshall flew to Britain. In any case, the American views were stated with the same clarity, candor and when needed, tenacity, that helped General Pershing win over Allied leaders. British authorities here voice admiration for the solid qualities of

Ghosts to Appear on Stage at Saenger Saturday Night

This is just one of the many scenes from the ghastly, horrifying, blood chilling Dr. Silkin's Ghost Show, featuring in person Frankenstein Monster, direct from Hollywood, at the Saenger Theater. Midnight Saturday. Be sure you can take it! Don't attend if you have a weak heart. Also on the scene the season's latest scare show, "The Haunted House".

our Army's Chief of Staff. It is made an important contribution to the determining for this summer of an Allied grand strategy.

Time May Dictate Allied Strategy

If the United Nations were given the choice, 1943 rather than 1942 might be the preferred year for a grand offensive against the Germans in western Europe. But time often dictates strategy, and the hands off the clock point toward 1942 for two reasons:

(1) If German industry this summer must meet only the demands of land warfare against Russia and the Near East, it can probably pile up in addition such a reserve that we never could excel it by the wide margin needed for victory.

(2) If the Red Army or the less-advanced British Near East Army should cave under Nazi blows, Japan is expected by many authorities to attack Siberia. If that attack succeeds, we lose our one remaining chance, once our Alaskan bases are adequate, to deal hard blows at the heart of Japan. Also the Japanese, if they could be basing in Siberia, would greatly improve their position for attack on Alaska and thence our Northwest.

Corregidor's loss strengthens the menace to Russia by strengthening Japan's southward supply lines, helping to free her for northward moves.

Second Front Needed to Help Russia

How can we make sure that Russia does not crack?

The supplies we can send this summer may not be enough. But Allied troops—even air forces—are held at arm's length by distance and Soviet suspicion. The only other way to help Russia is by drawing from her front enough German troops—and particularly enough guns, airplanes and tanks—to swing the pendulum of battle. And the only way to do that is to force the Germans to supply one other major front where fighting is intense.

That is the grim logic of events. And if this summer brings real danger of Russia cracking, that logic is likely to result in a desperate yet carefully planned attempt to land an expeditionary force on the continent. Whatever spot may be chosen, several have already been discussed. The immediate objective need not be Berlin nor even Paris, to attain the result desired. The prelude may be a series of Commando raids all along the coast from Trondheim to St. Nazaire, bumbling the Germans and picking a soft spot. There, at the chosen moment, would be hurled a force that might ultimately total thirty divisions, chosen largely from the two million shock troops now in the British Isles. Wherever they land, they would be accompanied by "Free" forces—Norwegian, Dutch, Belgian, French.

U. S. to Supply
Crushing Strength

The British would be encouraged to bear the brunt by American aid, future and present. This aid would be strongest in aircraft—heavy and medium bombers now being flown across, fighters that soon may be. Crushing air strength would be needed, for it is estimated that every Allied division would be opposed by two German divisions.

But one main reason why the British Isles are the best American base for attack is that we would have an umbrella over our heads—the RAF. If the effort succeeded, we would reinforce it, preparing for a bigger follow-through in the spring.

But it might bring on a battle unprecedented in history. The Nazis might strike back through the air with a counter-invasion of Britain. Inside Germany, pretty safe from the RAF, they are reported to have hidden fleets of gliders bearing twelve to twenty-four men each. These gliders would be released at night, high enough and far enough away so that they would descend noiselessly. The crews are especially trained to strike at sensitive points, especially power stations and lines, preparing for a German counter-landing.

Crack Troops Needed
To Protect England

Which helps explain some British reluctance to risk the difficult Channel crossing without leaving more behind them than their two million Home Guards, who are not frontline troops nor equipped for every contingency. Also, the Germans could be expected to mass all their submarines to attack the allied shipping used to transport invading forces. And this, even if the invasion succeeded, might starve out Britain. Shipping is still the United Nations' great weakness, as some naval authorities have warned.

If either Nazi counter-stroke succeeded, we would have to give up hope of beating Hitler (unless his empire collapsed of its own weight), withdraw from Europe, and wait until the Navy could build the ships and especially the aircraft carriers to beat Japan—if Hitler let us wait that long.

One day came a sequence for which Miss Bennett was asked to wear one of her own sleek party gowns. She wore it, and then sent the studio a bill which adequately soothed her annoyance about the eyelashes. The amount for rental of the dress was $750. She collected it, too.

88 Citizens Attend Patmos Rally Saturday

Patmos Community showed a real determination to deliver its full share of the goods and services essential to war production and final victory in a meeting attended by 88 citizens at the school house Saturday, May 16 at 8 p. m. Farmers, 4-H, FFA and Home Demonstration Club members gathered at the school house for the purpose of learning more about their possibilities for contributing the maximum goods and services essential to uninterrupted production of the vital war materials. They had an opportunity of seeing three films entitled "Farmers and Defense" "Women in Defense" and "Homes for Defense."

"Don't be a chump!" snorted the celluloid mogul. "Just ignore the order and wait a few days. I can get you a better deal!"

Fields' home remained ablaze while the comedian listened to phonograph records.

DeMille rushed over, banged on the door and then rushed in. "Get these lights out," he ordered, "and fill your bathtubs. It's a blackout, and the whole town's dark except this."

"Always the showman!" said Fields admiringly. "The great DeMille can't even have a blackout without a bathtub!"

There have been uncomplimentary comments about the numbers of Hollywoodmen who have been wangling commissions in the Navy and Army. Now a story is told about a fairly prominent individual who, meeting a big shot studio executive, mentioned he had just got his orders to go into the Signal Corps as a second lieutenant.

"Don't be a chump!" snorted the celluloid mogul. "Just ignore the order and wait a few days. I can get you a better deal!"

Several farmers showed plans that established their determination and forethought in the production of critical materials. A review of the farm plan of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Rogers offered convincing proof of their desire to serve to the limit of their capacity in the production of the food and fiber which has been indicated by the Secretary of Agriculture as most important in the war program. Included in the farm plan are 11 acres of mammoi soy beans that will be converted into vegetable oil which has been listed by the United States Department of Agriculture near the top of all farm products needed in the war effort. Another farm production project of equal importance which Mr. and Mrs. Rogers has established includes the development of a 250 bird flock of laying hens. Considering the fact that both of these farm products are near the top of the list of most needed farm products Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and Community that have established their farm families of the Patmos their farm plan after considering the products needed most by the army are certainly making a contribution of no less importance than people employed in actual production of war materials.

Mr. Elmer Brown, Supt. of Patmos School, discussed the scrap iron collection campaign being sponsored by the Hempstead County Defense Council headed by Mr. Aubrey Albritton and expressed confidence that the people of Patmos Community would not sit idly by and be responsible for a slowing up in the production of planes, tanks and guns essential to speedy and complete victory.

Barney W. Chambers, assistant county agent, discussed the purchase of defense stamps and bonds.

Mr. Chambers expressed confidence that the farm people would be quick to rally to the pledge campaign realizing that life and freedom along with the security and future happiness of each one of us is being challenged and that the outcome of this great struggle depends upon the cooperative support of every loyal boy and girl and man and woman in America.

This cause comes on to be heard upon the affidavit of J. Robert Crocker, Special Attorney for United States Department of Justice, and it appearing to the Court that the United States of America has commenced an action to condemn certain parcels of land lying and being in the Western District of Arkansas, fully described in the petition filed in this proceeding, for the uses and purposes of the petitioner under the provisions of Act of Congress approved February 26, 1931, and Acts supplementary thereto and amendatory thereof and Acts of Congress approved July 2, 1917, April 11, 1918 and March 27, 1941, and that the following named persons are necessary and proper parties to this proceeding to-wit: J. Handling of Lespedeza Is Important Now Proper mowing and handling of lespedeza sericea is extremely important this year in view of the need for additional livestock feed in the Food-for-Freedom program, according to Riley Lewallen, Chairman of the Rouge-Bedone Soil Conservation District. Sericea is an important soil-saving, soil-improving crop.

It will soon be time to make the first cutting of sericea hay and Lewallen urged farmers to mow early if they expect to secure palatable hay that livestock will relish.

The best hay is made when sericea plants average about 12 inches in height. After the stems begin to get tough and the flavor bitter. If the hay is cut at its most palatable stage, cows will eat more of it and produce more milk, he pointed out.

Mr. Lewallen recommended setting the mower blade high enough so as not to cut the sericea stems too close to the ground. Successful producers of this kind of hay leave a stubble from three to four inches high. This assures two good cuttings of hay a year, since new growth comes from the stubble. Last year on his own one acre plot he harvested 2½ tons of high quality hay.

Another important point to remember in harvesting sericea for hay, is to cut it early in the morning. Moving at that time makes it possible for the hay to be cut, raked, and baled all the same day, he explained. The sooner it is cured and stored, the smaller will be the loss from shattering. Proper cured, sericea makes a bright green leafy hayume, he said.

"Leave the hay in the swath for about 45 minutes, then rake into windrows, and then when cured, bale or store it in the afternoon," Mr. and Mrs. J. Dale Wilson left Tuesday to spend a few days with their daughter, Mrs. R. B. McGee and Mr. McGee in Galveston, Texas.

The physical examinations will be done by local physicians, assisted by the County Health Nurse.

The committee in charge of the clinic is: Mrs. C. A. Robison, chairman, Mrs. J. W. Bradley and Mrs. W. H. Rowland.

Private Walter Cook, a U. S. Marine from Scranton, Pa., was credited with picking off 21 Germans at Belleau Wood in World War I, many at a distance of 1200 yards.

A mutiny aboard a Siamese vessel on September 11, 1853, caused the commander to ask for U. S. Marines aboard the USS Mississippi to quell the disturbance.
